COURT OF COMMON PLEAS: NEW YORK CITY.

Before Presiding Judge Daly and Judges Brady and Van Vorst.

Caution to Owners of Vicious Animals—They are Responsible for Damages Done by their Beasts.

Charles Koney, Plaintiff and Respondent, vs. Warren Ward, Defendant and Appellant.

The defendant in this action owned a horse which was accustomed to bite. He knew of the vicious propensity of the animal, and to guard against its usually kept him muzzled. One day in October, 1866, the horse was standing on the sidewalk in Twelfth street, before defendant's wagon, which was backed up to defendant's lumber yard. The horse was not muzzled at the time. He had been fed a short time before and the muzzle had been removed to feed and water him, after which the horse was led by the person who had him in charge to the wagon and hitched to it. The defendant's servant was then about to go to stable for the muzzle to put on the horse; at this time the plaintiff returning from his dinner came along the sidewalk and stepped from the walk into the street to pass the horse, but as he was in the act of stepping back near the horse's head, he was caught and bitten in the shoulder by the animal. The plaintiff had known the horse for two or three years, and knew that he was accustomed to bite. The defendant's servant saw plaintiff approaching, and called out to him, by way of warning. Plaintiff did not hear the call until he was at the horse's head, and as he turned toward the person calling, he was bitten. Plaintiff knew that the defendant kept the horse muzzled, but did not notice that the muzzle was off until he was seized and bitten. The plaintiff says when he was bitten, the defendant's servant was engaged in loading the wagon. The plaintiff was laid up and prevented from working for two weeks from this injury, and incurred medical expenses incident to his cure. To recover damages for the injury, plaintiff brought an action in the Third Judicial Derict Court of the City of New York. The Justice rendered a judgment in favor of the plaintiff for $50 damages, besides costs, from which judgment this appeal was taken to the General Term of this Court. John E. Parsons for appellant; W. C. Carpenter for respondent.

VAN VORST, J.—A person who keeps a domestic animal which has, to his knowledge, a vicious propensity, is liable in damages for the injuries committed by it in the indulgence of its evil disposition. The action rests upon the negligence of the owner in keeping an animal which is so likely to prove injurious and hurtful. The scienta is the gist of the action. In Cogeswell vs. Baldwin, 15 Vermont R., 404, it was decided that the owner of a cow accustomed to hook—this vicious propensity being known to the owner—is liable for damages done by her although it be done in the highway, against the land of the owner, and while going to her usual watering place." In that case, the owner of the cow, knowing of her propensity, had caused buttons to be put on her horns as a preventive. But the cow hooked the plaintiff's horse, in the road, so that one of the wounds made he died, and the plaintiff had a verdict. In the case before this Court it appears that the defendant knew that his horse had a habit of biting, and to guard against it he kept him muzzled. At the time the plaintiff returning from his dinner came along the sidewalk and stepped from the walk into the street to pass the horse, but as he was in the act of stepping back near the horse's head, he was caught and bitten

CITY SCRIP.

It is of the very last importance to the people of Memphis that the scrip of the city should increase in value, and the amount of it outstanding be reduced. In this all have a common interest. At the date of the late municipal election, the current value of scrip was thirty-two or thirty-three cents in national currency, for the dollar; of that currency itself, one dollar and thirty-five cents being required to purchase one dollar in gold. One hundred dollars in scrip would therefore purchase but twenty-four dollars and forty-four cents in coin.

It was on account of this common interest, that we published to the people, a few days ago, the statement of balances appearing upon the Register's books against certain Banks and individuals, we having, as we thought, certain grounds for believing that some of our Banks had been habitually allowed to sell checks on the Comptroller, instead of scrip, when they had no deposits of scrip on hand to meet the checks so drawn. We are glad to know, by the positive statement of the Comptroller, that this has not been the habit, since a greater abuse than it would have been can hardly be imagined.

Whenever the currency of a nation is depreciated in value below coin, it at once becomes a subject for gambling and the speculations of those whose gains are other men's losses or the loss of the public. The case is the same when the evidences of indebtedness of a county or city are depreciated; and there is always a combination of individuals interested to keep the currency or scrip depreciated, as a means of such gambling speculation. Apart from the injurious effect of this upon the currency or scrip itself, and upon the public corporation whose scrip is thus kept unduly depreciated, all such speculation is demoralizing and corrupting, and especially when banks abandon their legitimate business to engage in it.

During the past year, the Common Council, constrained in some degree by necessity, has pursued a policy in regard to the City scrip which may well be characterized as ruinous, and the result of which, if it should be continued, must inevitably be the utter bankruptcy of the city. Salaries and other demands have been habitually paid in scrip, at, we believe, two dollars for one due in National currency, and when the officer or party paid has disposed of this scrip at a lower rate, the difference has been made up to him. This latter favour has not been extended to all; because the amount due the Appeal from the city has been paid in scrip at two for one, and although we were compelled to dispose of it at a much lower rate, the difference has not been made up to us.

It is quite evident that, under this system, the parties receiving scrip from the city have had no inducement to keep up its price, because the loss caused by its depreciation did not fall upon them, but upon the city, which thus, in effect, assisted to depreciate its own paper. Of course the debt increases enormously, when three dollars of scrip are issued to pay one dollar of salary or a debt; and it is evident that no corporation dealing in that manner, can long escape bankruptcy. Let the Common Council hereafter pay each officer his salary in scrip at its current value, if it can do no better; but it ought at once to put an end to reclamations for loss upon sale of scrip so paid.

Of course it is one of the evils of a depreciated currency, that those who labour for it or are paid in it on any score, are unequally paid, no matter what rule is followed. If salaries are made payable at so many dollars in scrip, the amount being fixed when it is low, too much will be paid when it rises; and vice versa; and if so much scrip is paid as will purchase the amount due in currency to day, he who is able to hold it may in a little while be found to have been paid twice his debt or salary.

It is therefore exceedingly desirable, on all accounts, that the scrip should be retired as rapidly as possible. The poor man who has to pay his taxes to-day, if scrip is worth sixty cents, pays nearly twice as much, for the same indebtedness, as he who happened to be able to pay two weeks ago. Of course every man has the right to buy and sell scrip, and no one can say that it is not a fair and reputable business for him to buy low and sell high. But, nevertheless, the effect of all such speculation is injurious to the tax payers who have to purchase small sums in scrip, and are at the mercy of the large dealers. Every unfair and illegitimate device, therefore, for keeping down the scrip, ought to be, as far as possible, prevented.

Now, we do not know that we have been correctly informed in respect to one alleged abuse; but we have heard it from so many quarters that it at least deserves inquiry and investigation. It is, that certain city officials have been in the habit of receiving national currency or greenbacks, for amounts due the city, and, instead of paying into the Treasury in kind, the moneys so received, of buying scrip, and paying it in, dollar for dollar, pocketing the profit as perquisites of their office. One, perhaps recently elected, has, we understood from a gentleman of the bar, taken legal advice as to whether this can lawfully be done, and been answered in the affirmative.

It is absolutely certain that any such transaction is a fraudulent embezzlement, and application to his own use, by the officer, of the moneys of the corporation, under articles 4708, 4711 and 4712 of the Code, the punishment of which, by Article 4714 is imprisonment in the Penitentiary for not more than ten years. Every such officer is a trustee, as to the funds that he receives, and so to dispose of them and make profit, is a fraudulent breach of trust and a misdemeanor; besides which he may be made to account as trustee, by bill in Chancery, and to pay over all profits so realized by him. No trustee can make profit for himself by means of the funds of the trust; but will be held to account for them, and to pay them over with compound interest.

The people of Memphis will expect the Mayor and Aldermen to provide by ordinance that all officers receiving funds daily or occasionally for the city, shall report at stated short periods, and pay into the Treasury all funds so received, in the same money in which they receive them. No one should be allowed to mix such funds with his own, or to retain them beyond the day of their receipt. Every one receiving moneys should be required to give duplicate receipts, specifying the kind of money received; and any one dealing with the funds of the city as his own should be promptly dealt with by due course of law. The transactions of the past should be inquired into; and if the funds of the city have been unlawfully dealt with, the offenders should be made to account for their gains, to the last dollar. Mark! all this is to be done AT ONCE. We shall see to it that it is.

In every department of the city government there must be a strict economy and rigid accountability. There are not the times in which to increase the burthens of the people, if it can be avoided; and least of all by permitting the squandering or unlawful use of the public moneys. Let us have inquiry into abuses, if there are any, and prompt correction of them, or the triumph of the Conservatives will be but brief and unprofitable; and so it ought to be, if the Conservative party is to prove the conservator of abuses.

From the Atlanta Intelligencer:

LAGRANGE, GA., January 8, 1868.

The following may be of general interest, and is sent for publication to your widely circulated journal: In January last, Mr. Isaac Lowe, of this county, rented land and hired freedmen to cultivate the same. Under a statute of the last General Assembly, he applied to a factor in this city to furnish him supplies sufficient to carry on his crop then planted, which was done; the planter executing a lien, according to such statute upon his crop, to secure the payment of such advance. Under the misfortune of a short crop and the unanticipated decline in cotton, the crop raised was insufficient to pay the rent, the factor, and the freedmen.

The agent of the Bureau of R. F. & A. L. for this county, seized the cotton for the negroes, leaving the landlord for his rent, and the factor for his supplies furnished, to look out for themselves.

At this stage the factor employed us as an attorney at law, to represent his interest. At once I filed his petition, setting forth the facts as well as the statute under which he claimed his priority, with a copy of the lien; tendered the same to the revenue agent; obtained the indorsement of his action in the premises, and had it forwarded to Col. Sibley, Assistant Commissioner of the Bureau for Georgia, for his judgment and decision. The petition was returned from his office, approving the action of his subordinates, whereupon exceptions to the same were filed, and an appeal taken and forwarded to Gen. Grant, Secretary of War, who failed to take any action whatever, but referred the same to one Gen. Howard for his decision, who held that the agent here had done right, and his course was approved. The appeal was made directly to the Secretary of War, for the purpose of settling these vexed questions. We now see that an edict of the Freedmen's Bureau can set aside all laws regulating the rights of persons who, in good faith, make their contract under the laws of the land--destroying all legal priorities--and hence the hesitancy of planters, and others, to employ negroes in agricultural or mechanical pursuits; and the representations of bureau agents, that the General Government must furnish relief and subsistence to the freedmen.

Very truly yours, JAS. S. WALKER.

We doubt whether there is any just cause of complaint in the case thus stated. The principles of the civil law in respect to privileges are adopted in our law, because they are intrinsically just. For that reason, too, they are followed in the admiralty. The maxim that "there are no fruits until expenses are deducted," (nonnulli sunt fructus, nisi impensis deductis), is as much a principle of our law as it was of the Roman law; and by that law, also, the laborer was first to be paid out of the fruits. Next would come the factors who furnished supplies, and not until afterwards the landlord, for his rent. It is on the same principle that the crew of a vessel are entitled to priority for their wages. An express lien created in favour of a factor would not prevail over the laborers' claims, unless a statute expressly gave it priority; and such a statute would be unjust. It is the labour of the labourer that makes and saves the crop for the factor and landlord. Let us do justice, though the Heavens fall.

ORGANIZATION.

The St. Louis Republican says:

To-day we see three millions of people putting on their armor to save the Republic from the destruction to which the Radical revolutionists are driving it. The "uprising" is universal. The journals of every Northern State, as they reach us from day to day, tell of the organizations of Democrats and Conservatives in every county, and in all the cities and towns. They come together with resolute and hopeful enthusiasm for the national purpose of overthrowing the worst party that ever cursed a nation by its reign, and whose history for the past three years is a long record of misdeeds which have destroyed the prosperity of the country, reduced ten republican States to military despotisms, overwhelming them with the ruin of all their material interests, and making a black kingdom out of nearly one half of the territory of the Republic. There is still a discovered Union, a rump Congress, a Constitution set at naught, revolutionary powers dominating the country, appalling debt and crushing taxation, with a still gloomier prospect before the nation, unless the revolutionary party is driven from power. This is it which is calling into rapid organization all the Conservative forces of the nation. In the South as well as in the North there is the same uprising of the friends of the Constitution and the Union. All our Southern exchanges, in every State, are filled with calls for meetings, with reports of organizations completed, embracing every portion of every State, and comprising not merely those whom Radicals call "rebels," but men who never swerved from their practical devotion to the Union, but who see in Radical ascendancy a curse more to be dreaded than the secession which they resisted to the last. There is one dominant purpose uniting, animating and directing this grand and exhilerating uprising of three millions of fighting men. It is a determination to take the Government of the nation out of the hands of a wicked party which has practically destroyed the Government our fathers made, by setting aside the Constitution and establishing their own party will as the supreme law of the land. They are public enemies and must be overthrown, and a party placed in power which will obey the Constitution and limit its action by the provisions of that organic law. We never can have peace, safety, contentment, prosperity and an assured future until the nation recovers for itself that Constitution which Radicals have cast aside, and makes it once more the standard and protector of the liberties and privileges of every State. The battle of 1868 must settle forever in this nation, that the irresponsible and unregulated will of a party majority in Congress shall not be the supreme law of the land.

We do earnestly hope that the Conservatives of Memphis will not sit down and fold their hands and go to sleep again, because Mr. Leftwich has been elected Mayor, and the city offices distributed among those who could bring the greatest pressure to bear on the Mayor and Aldermen. It is time to organize the Conservative party of the State, to agree upon a platform upon which all men opposed to negro suffrage can stand, whatever their politics heretofore. To win victory, we must look to principle alone, and appeal to the intelligence of the people. We carried the city by doing so: we can carry the State in the same way. Let us have no paltering, no equivocation, no humbug, no promises made even to negroes, to be broken hereafter, when we have the power. Whatever our promises to them, they must be inviolate. Political trickery will win no longer. The people have been taught some hard lessons, and they have profited by it. We must meet the Conservative Union men of East Tennessee half way, and give them assurance that if they unite with us, they shall meet with the most perfect and entire good faith, and not be entrapped into committing themselves to anything contrary to their principles as Union men. They do not want the votes of negroes to neutralize their own. They did not stand by the flag of the Union, and risk persecution, and stake all they had and were on the result of the great war, for that,--to have the negro made their political peer. Let us have organization throughout the State, an honest and truthful platform; and there is regeneration yet for Tennessee. If there be any who think that their claims to office ought to have received greater consideration, let them congratulate themselves, as we congratulate them in perfect sincerity, that they have not been paid for the good service they did. There is nothing of which a man has so much right to be proud, as that he has served and worked for the country and the party of the country, all his life, and been never paid for any part of his service, either with office or emoluments. We should be sorry if the day should ever come when we could not say that.

Conservatives of Tennessee, it is time to be up and doing. The victory obtained here, proves what you can do all over the State, if you will try. Thousands of honest Union men are ready to unite with you. Why should they not be? Neither they nor the mass of us want offices, or power, or the profits of party victory. We all alike desire the prosperity of the State, the restoration of the Union to its first estate, the faithful observance of the Constitution, respect for the Courts, obedience to the laws.

We do not believe that even William G. Brownlow, once a Whig and a Conservative, of that great party to which so many great, wise and good men belonged, is any more in favour, at heart, with negro suffrage, than he was ten years ago. If he is, we know that the Union men of East Tennessee are not. The time has come when the old animosities should be buried. In war, there are always grievous wrongs done on both sides, of which both ought to be ashamed; which they ought always to regret. The scars of the Civil War will remain a long while; but it is time that we should let the wounds heal over, and live in peace together hereafter. The graves of our Dead, where they sleep side by side, ought to soften towards each other the hearts of the living, and opprobrious epithets and words of hate be heard no more.

Union, Organization, Energy, Resolution! These are what will win success. Let us not sink into apathy or despair. That party which shall unite into one the old Whig and Democratic legions of Tennessee, will be greater than either was in its best days, and will have a greater work before it.

OFFICE-SEEKERS.

The following picture, by John Bright, of the Fox office-seekers and office-holders of England, is one for which other men and places might have sitten. Nothing in the world displays human nature in so shabby an aspect, as that which old General Cass, himself the most inveterate of office-holders, once termed "the insatiate thirst for office." "Great God," he cried, when more than ordinarily beset and badgered, as much so, perhaps, that day, as Leftwich after his election to the office of Mayor,--"Great God! will this insatiate lust for office never cease?" Mr. Bright said of the Tories, in a recent speech:

Their conduct in the pursuit of office reminds me of some lines which were published a great many years ago, which never had a more exact application than when they describe the course of the Tory party last year. The poet in the "Rejected Addresses" says:

So when "dogs' meat" re-echoes through the Rush sympathetic dogs from their retreat. Seam with bright blaze their suppliating eyes, Work their blind legs, ascend their joyful cries. Then, wild with hope and panting to prevail, Count the quick card and wags the expectant tail.

Just so the gentlemen of the front opposition benches, and such of them behind who thought that there was something to be had, especially and above all the lawyers, who have since been gorged with patronage and for ages past of that patronage and plunder which in India is called "loot," formed a combination to overthrow the bill of 1866 and place themselves in office. And to keep there the majority to pass a bill infinitely worse in all the points on which we condemned the bill of 1866. And I venture to say their conduct on this occasion leads to the conclusion that there is scarcely any institution of the country, however honorable and ancient that they would not sell for the permanent possession of office.

The fact is perfectly appalling. Two millions of acres of valuable land for sale in a single State for debt; and no buyers for it, because Radicalism has shut out capital and closed the doors against immigration!

SPECIALS TO APPEAL.

ARKANSAS.

UNAUTHORIZED CONVENTION.

Sharp Discussion in Progress on Negro Suffrage.

Special Dispatch to the Appeal:

LITTLE ROCK, January 14.--In the Convention, Brooks, of Phillips county, having the floor, as agreed yesterday on adjournment, said he would respond to the gentleman's speech yesterday on the adoption of the present constitution, more to rebuke the tone than from a desire to make a set speech. At the same time he would meet the points of argument, deprecating the use of epithets. He hoped he would be excused from dealing in such terms, but when denounced by the opposition, as perjurers, traitors, carpet-sack delegates, and dubbed by papers (reading from Gazette) as kangaroos, gorrillas and adventurers, he could hardly avoid expressing his rising indignation.

Cypert interrupted the speaker. He did not use the language imputed.

Brooks could not mistake the gentleman's language. His opprobrious epithet about negroes, speaking of honorable members on this floor, though not intended as a personal offence, would better become Billingsgate Fish market than the halls of this honorable body.

Cypert said, "If the gentleman persists in imputing such language to me, I will be compelled to pronounce it false."

Brooks said, "The delegates here are respectable--representing honorable constituents--though odorous delegates may be here, differing in caste and color, not his own; yet, if the gentleman's speech indicates the character of the people he represents, he would prefer to be classed with the odorous than his side of the House. The gentleman must know he was not here by sufferance, but by the right given by the flag floating over the capital. He had fought for the privilege of citizenship everywhere in this country; he had left Arkansas the last time under compulsion; he had come to stay, and reconstruct the State; he had the power and will to do it, and gentlemen who have strayed, 'backed by twenty-two thousand negroes,' as we are, may ere long find it compatible with their interest to return to this side of the House."

After an hour's speech this kind speaker concluded, when Hicks of Bradley, and Duval of Lawrence, participated, the latter saying he had fought through the war for the preservation of the Union, and thought it never broken. He was unwilling to give the negro the right to vote. This was a white man's Government and should be conducted by white men. Congress never agreed to give the negro the franchise for services in putting down the rebellion. They had no right to expect it. He would point Gray, the negro, to the condition of his own people in Africa, where he could see what they had done during eighteen hundred years towards Republican Government. He thought, like Hicks, if the negroes ever had a convention in Africa, it was to roast and eat enemies. He was opposed to negro suffrage, and would, though loyal as the gentleman from Phillips, always oppose it.

The motion to adjourn to Thursday amidst general confusion of tongues finally prevailed.

MISSISSIPPI.

THE CONVENTION.

Discussion Between the White and Negro Elements.

Special Dispatch to Memphis Appeal:

JACKSON, January 14--9 p.m.--The report of Mr. Compton, of Marshall, as a minority report on the compensation of members, monopolized the attention of the Convention to-day.

Holland's resolution of censure brought Compton to the floor. He remarked that he did not propose to reply to it, but to assure the Convention that he intended no insult. If a gentleman cannot give expression to his views, he would like to know what privilege he had on this floor. If the delegates didn't subscribe to the propositions contained in his report, why did they not confine themselves to a defense of the Military Bill. He obeyed that bill because it was the law of the land, but held he had the right, even as a delegate to this Convention, to assert its unconstitutionality.

Morgan offered a substitute to reject the minority report, and declaring that it is obnoxious and an insult to the loyal people of the State, and in defiance to the law of the land, and calculated to disturb the public peace; for all of which Compton merited the censure of the Convention, and recommends he be granted a leave of absence for fourteen days.

Musgrove offered a substitute for both the previous resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Convention that the Delegate from Marshall, in his minority Report which he has submitted, has violated the spirit and obligation of the registration oath, which he claims to have taken.

Compton repeated that the Minority Report was offered in no factious spirit, and was not designed as a bomb shell to create confusion.

Field suggested that if he, as a gentleman, made amende honorable, he should be forgiven, for by his statement he had virtually asked forgiveness.

Compton--"I asked no forgiveness."

Field--"I choose to so understand it."

Field moved to amend the resolution, by adding, "But that gentleman did not believe he was violating said oath."

Compton requested Field to withdraw the amendment, and desired the question to be put nakedly without qualification, and would say before the vote was taken if the delegates on the other side of the house are endeavoring to excite the scorn and contempt of the gentlemen on this side, he assured them it was unnecessary to exert themselves further in that direction.

Field withdrew his amendment, and the resolution was adopted--49 to 33.

FROM COLUMBUS, OHIO.

COLUMBUS, January 14.--Judge Thurman has been elected United States Senator.

FROM NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.--The Convention to-day adopted article 74 of the Constitution, fixing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, and article 74, defining the qualifications and salaries of the Judges.

The Republican Convention last night nominated H. C. Warmouth for Governor, Alderman F. E. Dumon (negro) for Lieutenant-Governor, and George Bovee for Secretary of State.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, January 14.--Stanton issued an order this afternoon informing the employees of the war office that he had again taken possession of the portfolio of the war office. Stanton to day drew nearly $3000 from the pay office, being his salary during his suspension.

Pope has been assigned to the command of the Department of the Lakes, with his headquarters at Detroit.

It is understood that the President has in no way recognized Stanton. It is confidently stated that charges of insubordination hang over Grant. Nothing definitely is known, but the feeling is quite feverish.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, January 14, p.m.--The telegraphers at Belfast, recently arrested for Fenianism, have been discharged.

LIVERPOOL, January 14, 1:20 p.m. Consols, 92½@92¾; 5-20s, 71¼. Cotton unchanged.

LONDON, January 14.--Consols closed at 92½@92¾. United States bonds, 71¼.

CONGRESSIONAL.

WASHINGTON, January 14.--In the Senate to-day petitions were presented for an appropriation to charter a vessel and buy provisions for the suffering poor of Sweden; also a resolution for gradually reducing the army; a bill amending the act for the security of travelers by steam vessels; one for reducing the number of Major Generals and Brigadier Generals; and another for restoring the lands confiscated by the States lately in rebellion.

Davis' amendment to the Constitution, providing a Tribunal to determine constitutional questions, was discussed, after which the anti-contraction resolution was discussed until the adjournment.

In the House, the Committee on Ways and Means reported the bill for the repeal of the cotton tax, as amended by the Senate, with a resolution of non-concurrence, which was adopted.

The Secretary of the Treasury was called on for the expense in furnishing the National banks with a circulating medium.

The bill reported by the Appropriation Committee for the payment of claims on account of seizures of damaged vessels, cars, wagons, or for lands occupied for fortifications in the South during the war, was laid over, and the Reconstruction Committee's bill resumed and discussed.

The Speaker read a communication from Grant conveying the following from Meade: "Unless the pending bill in Congress directing the military to fill the offices in their departments rescinds the test oath in the provisions to select qualified voters, I am informed that its execution in this department will be entirely impracticable."

After which the House adjourned.

FROM JACKSON.

Proceedings of Mississippi Convention.

DELAYED REPORTS.

JACKSON, Miss., January 13.--In the Convention to day a resolution was adopted to appoint a Committee of three to inquire into the validity of the charter of the Jackson Gas Company, with power to send for persons and papers.

A resolution was offered by a negro member, but not finally acted upon, for the appointment of a Committee of seven to inquire into the charges preferred against a portion of the people of this State, as promulgated in a recent proclamation of B. G. Humphreys, Provisional Governor of Mississippi.

The President having announced the receipt of 150 copies of the Alabama Constitution from the Executive Committee of the National Republican party, Mr. Cunningham moved a vote of thanks.

Mr. Watson objected, and hoped the Convention would confine itself to the specific duties for which it had assembled. He did not understand why so many thanks were necessary in that or any other direction.

On motion of Mr. Fields, the resolution was so amended as to thank the committee for what it had already done and what it intended doing in the future, and so amended it was passed.

The following was made the special order for to-morrow at 12 o'clock:

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed by the Chair, whose duty it shall be to ascertain whether any members of this Convention have in any way identified themselves against the reconstruction acts of Congress, and declared the assemblage of the Convention unconstitutional, and who do not regard the ordinances and acts of this Convention, and to report the same as soon as possible.

The Majority report of the Committee on Compensation, recommends $20 per day for the President, $10 for the members, and $15 for each reporter and the Secretary, $10 for the Sergeant-at-Arms, and 10 cents mileage each way.

Mr. Field moved to re-commit it, with instructions to bring a report reducing the fees enumerated at least sixty per cent.

Mr. Compton submitted as a Minority Report a preamble and resolution declaring the Convention unconstitutionally convened, and not competent to make amendments to the Constitution of Mississippi. Therefore the officers and members are not entitled to compensation for any service they may propose to render in such capacity to the people of the State of Mississippi or the people of the United States, and concluding,

Be it further resolved, That this Convention do now adjourn sine die.

There was much discussion, but action was finally postponed on both reports.

Clark offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing that no motion to adjourn sine die should be entertained unless five days previous notice be given, thereupon Townsend gave notice that he would on Saturday, the 18th instant, make a motion that the Convention should so adjourn.

The Barbarous Mode of Living Adopted by Negroes.

The Native Virginian, published at Orange Courthouse, gives the following lamentable condition of the negroes in that section:

In parts of Louisa and generally in Fluvanna, huts are multiplying rapidly. Many of these huts are built in the wildest solitudes, a mile or more from arable land, and accessible only by a narrow path which the traveler passes unnoticed. They are built in the hastiest manner, of the rudest materials, and resemble more the habitations of the beaver than the residences of human beings. In these thickets the negro children are being reared in absolute, almost barbarous, idleness. These are the fruits of abolitionism--the beginning of the end.

SENT UP.—One big A little a ron, whose surname is Wilson, of the colored persuasion, was arrested yesterday, charged with stealing a coat, vest and four dollars in currency from Hugh McDermott, of the Basket saloon. A SCALPER CAUGHT.—One Michael Hanley, the driver of what is known to the profession as a scalping wagon, was arrested by the police yesterday, charged with swindling a negro out of the sum of forty dollars. From the negro's story, it appears that himself and wife came from Sunflower, Mississippi, on the steamer Kate Kinney and desired to go to Georgia. They gave Hanley a dollar to take them to the Charleston depot. On arriving there, the negro gave him eighty dollars to purchase tickets to the desired point, the cost of which was forty-two and a half dollars. For pocketing the balance Hanley was arrested. He will attend the Police Commissioner's levee this morning.

FAVOURS WANTED.—We have in the Editorial den of our Chief a small collection of the State, County, Parish, City and Corporation Currency, during the Confederate "days that are no more." Any of our friends who can increase the collection will oblige us by contributing to it: and if they visit us, will find their gifts framed and glazed as curiosities.

We also wish to procure, for a lady's album, specimens of Confederate postage-stamps. It is of no importance that they are cancelled.

THE MYSTERY SOLVED.

Body of Capt. Kirkman Found Frozen to Death.

For several days the sudden disappearance of Capt. James F. Kirkman, only remaining son of John Kirkman, Esq., of Nashville, caused great uneasiness to the family and his many friends, and the greatest exertions were made for the recovery of the body, it being the general impression that he had been drowned. On the 11th it was discovered by mere accident, and the worst fears realized. The Bonner furnishes the following particulars: It appears that, on his return from having been drowned, Capt. Kirkman was found lying, face downward, on the brink of a steep bluff which overhangs Duck river, near what is known as Sulphur Spring ford. From those who first discovered the unfortunate victim to the catastrophe, it has been ascertained that, from all the indications, he had, after passing Rear Crees on his return to Columbia, followed a path which led down that stream to Sulphur Spring ford. This crossing, although safe enough in the summer, must, at the time, have been only twenty-five feet deep. He, however, forced his horse into the water, but was compelled to return to the bank, after getting well through to the skin. The weather was intensely cold, or, as was generally remarked, the severest ever known in that section. Under such circumstances his lease of life could have been made but for a short time. The unprotected to the chilling temperature and sank to the ground—whether at or near the spot where he was found about twelve o'clock yesterday, by a negro, who came upon him unexpectedly, is not known. No evidence has been adduced to light as justifying the belief that Capt. Kirkman came to his death by violence. With the exception of a few bruises on his leg and hand, doubtless produced by the fall of his horse, no person was found about him. His pocket-book, diamond ring, papers, etc., had not been disturbed. He was clearly frozen to death. The immersion in Duck river and subsequent exposure to so intense a degree of cold would have been too much for a constitution far more vigorous than his." Capt. Kirkman was twenty four years old, and had fought gallantly in the struggle for independence. He left a brother at Fort Donelson, and a sister who is now in the Cumberland river a short time previous to the war. The Banner says of the deceased: "Of all our young business men none stood higher or gave better promise of future usefulness than he, whose sudden and tragical decease this community now mourns. As an officer in the Confederate service, he served gallantly through the war, and returned home with an enviable reputation for courage and devotion to the Southern cause."

GERMAN NATIONAL BANK—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—The following named gentlemen were elected Directors of the German National Bank for the ensuing year: Louis Hanauer, of the firm of Schoenfield & Hanauer; Nathan Hoffheimer, of the firm of N. & J. Hoffheimer; John Hanauer, of the firm of Ferguson, Corder & Co; F. Engelbrecht, of the firm of Engelbrecht & Damman; John P. Hoffmann, of the firm of Mitchell, Hoffmann & Co; Jacob Weiler, H. H. Meyers. Owing to the fact that the old Board of Directors had changed the by-laws, curtailing the number of Directors from thirteen to seven, there was a most lively and spirited contest, which resulted as above. We certainly congratulate the stockholders on the result, as the present Board represent our most substantial business house, and are gentlemen well known to our community as successful and wealthy merchants.

DRAMATIC NEWS.—The husband of Ristori, the Marquis del Grillo, has caused a man in New York, named Oliver F. Papy, to be held to answer a charge of wrong ful and malicious arrest, laying his damages at $10,000. Papy was required to give bail in the sum of $5000.

The Black Crook ran four hundred and seventy-five nights, and the receipts were $760,000.

The Lotti Opera Troupe will give six performances in Nashville, commencing on Monday evening next.

Ole Bull is playing on his magic violin at Chicago.

"Music hath charms, etc." A colored individual, Frank Woods, at Nashville, borrowed a violincello to "play at a party," but pawned the same, and afterwards stole it from the pawnbroker. He went to the workhouse for thirty days, where he will be made to dance to music not his own.

The Parisians are fairly launched on the sea of novelty. "Gulliver's Travels" has been dramatized, the dialogue said to be very stupid, but the mise en-scene marvellous. The ballet girls are said to show that the Black Crook was shamefully overdressed at Niblo's. The Lilliputians are represented by little figures ingeniously worked.

Gounod's Faust was to be presented at New Orleans for the last time on the evening of the 11th, with Lambele as "Marguerite."

Judge Duvall, of the United States District Court, at New Orleans, has dismissed the injunction sued out by the proprietors of the Black Crook against the Tale of Enchantment. He decided there was no infringement of copyright.

The body of Mrs. Alice Wilson, equestrienne of Robinson's circus, who fell overboard between New Orleans and Mobile, was found on the 10th, in Grand Bay, eighteen miles from where she was lost.

Edwin Forrest commenced an engagement at the St. Charles, New Orleans, on Monday evening, as Richelieu—the Black Crook being put to one side.

DIRECT IMPORTATION.—Messrs. A. Vaccaro & Co. have just received per ship Genevieve, direct from Havre, 200 baskets of Piper Heidsic, one of the finest brands of champagne ever brought to this country. The wine came in bond to this city, and is the first shipment ever received here direct from France. This is a new enterprise, and will no doubt prove but the advance guard of many more to come. It will be closed out to the trade at the lowest rates.

The Great Closing Out Sale at Auction, of the entire stock of Furniture, Carpets, Oil Cloths, etc., now in the store which it will be seen no more spirits can be withdrawn from any bonded warehouse before payment of the tax:

A COMPLIMENTARY TESTIMONIAL

Interesting Presentation at the U. S. Court Room.

It has already been stated in the APPEAL that Hon. Connelly F. Trigg returned to the city on Monday, preparatory to the opening of the special term of the United States Courts to-day. On the afternoon of Monday the officers of the Courts, in a body, waited upon Judge Trigg, at his rooms in the Waldran Block, and after the usual courtesies, Col. J. B. Bingham, on behalf of the officers of the Courts, presented the learned Judge with a very handsome gold headed cane, as a token of their respect and esteem. The head of the cane, which is in the form of a crook, is beautifully chased and carved, and bears the following inscription neatly engraved on a shield: "The officers of the United States Courts to Judge Connelly F. Trigg," and on the end of the crook the words, "Memphis, Tenn., January 1, 1868." The cane is of beautiful black ebony, of medium size, while the gold head is at the same time elegant, massive and handsome. The presentation was entirely impromptu, so far as speeches were concerned, but the following was the substance of what was said on this very interesting occasion:

Col. J. B Bingham, standing in the center of the officers of the Courts, and addressing Judge Trigg, said:

Judge Trigg: We have called upon you this afternoon in a more formal manner than usual, with the officers of your Court, to pay our personal respects and to tender you our best wishes for your continual health and prosperity. On behalf of the officers of your Court, I have been deputed, only a few minutes ago, to present you this beautiful cane, as a slight testimonial of our confidence, respect and esteem, as well as our exalted sense of the honest, fearless and conscientious manner in which, during a critical period in the history of our community, you have discharged your delicate but important official duties. The soldier who successfully serves his country in the field—the statesman, whose eloquence and wisdom saves his country from impending calamity—each, in turn, receive the joyful acclaim of a grateful people; but the pathway of the lone and conscientious Judge, who steadily pursues the even tenor of his way, holding evenly balanced the scales of justice, is a quiet and unobtrusive one, unillumined by the excitements of the multitude, and where the well done plaudits of his countrymen seldom reach him, and he is surrounded only by the consciousness of right and of Duty well performed. But we, the officers of your Court, whose esteem for you is exactly proportioned to the intimacy of our social and personal, as well as official relations, believing that an upright and independent Judiciary is the best possible safeguard for the permanency of our free institutions, have felt it not inappropriate to manifest that regard by a token at once useful and ornamental. As the increasing years shall bring with it increasing honors, and possibly physical infirmities as well, we have deemed it appropriate to present you A CANE, on which to sustain your weary limbs in the future journey of life, and as emblematical of the relation which the Judiciary sustains to the government as our fathers made it—that however passion, ignorance and prejudice may sway the laws, a people worthy to be free will ever look upon an honest judiciary as their shield from individual wrong, as well as the best protection and security of their political rights and liberties. It only remains for me to add, Judge, that this coming affair was designed as a surprise to yourself, and that it was only frustrated by your unavoidable absence from the city. Hence we have availed ourselves of the earliest period after your return, to make good our long cherished intentions, and to wish for you, during its continuance, and along your future pathway, all the blessings of this life and of that which is to come.

Judge Trigg was evidently affected by the unexpected demonstration, and made his acknowledgements substantially as follows:

Col. Bingham: I am indeed surprised at so unexpected a testimonial by the officers of the United States Courts for Memphis, to me so gratifying, of their estimate of the discharge of my official duties, and of their personal kindness and confidence. I am at a loss to express my appreciation of a gift so handsome and one so emblematic of an upright discharge of official duty. You have well remarked, that age and infirmity are not less to be assisted and supported by the use of a cane, than are the laws to be upheld, and the liberties of the people to be protected by an honest, fearless and impartial judiciary. In a Government like ours, if Republican liberty is preserved, it must be by a faithful administration of justice in accordance with the Constitution and the laws. For liberty regulated by law is the only liberty worth preserving. I can only hope that the handsome compliment which you tender me on behalf of the officers of the Court, in commendation of my official conduct, may be merited, and that in the future you may have no reason to withdraw that confidence which you have expressed.

This is a very beautiful cane, and I fully appreciate, as well the compliment which its presentation conveys, as the kind and generous friendship of the donors. I shall cherish it, and when those old limbs of mine begin to fail, I shall be reminded that the officers of my Court I may look with the fullest confidence that in them I have friends who will sustain me. I cannot do more, gentlemen, than to express to you and hope you will accept my warmest thanks for the spirit in which you have presented me with so handsome a New Year's gift.

After the presentation refreshments were handed round, and an hour spent in a very pleasant and social manner.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW MEMPHIS THEATER.—MR. BOOTH'S SECOND WEEK.—Despite the condition of the streets, covered with mushy snow, Memphis was in its usual fashionably fllied to witness the representation of Richelieu. We have already expressed our admiration for the towering manner in which Mr. Booth represents the great "Cardinal," and last night he almost surpassed himself. If ever an actor seemed lost in a character, he certainly was in Richelieu. There stood the Prime Minister of France, the pillar of the State—the power on which rested the weal and woe of millions. The "Julie" of Miss McVicker was very artistically and feelingly presented. Mr. France, too, deserves mention for his careful representation of "Huguet." Mr. M

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY APPEAL,
MEMPHIS, January 14, 1868.

There was no new feature in Money matters to-day. Currency is no easier than earlier in the week, and commercial paper is not taken at our discount houses, except in rare instances, and then on very short time. Exchange is in excess of the ability of our banks to meet, and some parties are therefore kept off the market but regular customers are accommodated as usual. New York sight is taken at ¼ discount and sold at par. Other Eastern points are not so much in favor but are taken at ½ discount and sold at same as New York. New Orleans Exchange is taken at ½ discount and sold at a premium of ½ on the $100.

We had no New York Gold dispatches during the early part of the day, as the wires were down. A purchase was reported in open market at 38½, though the offering rate was 39@39½. Selling at 40@41c.

The same irregularity noticed yesterday characterized City Scrip to-day. Brokers generally are short and therefore not anxious to see it go up until they have laid in a supply. Some sales were made during the day at 50@50c in a small way, but we suppose that 50c would buy a round lot of $1000 to-day.

County Warrants are not changed since yesterday. The demand remains fair for small pieces. Buying at 65c and selling at 68@70c.

Police Scrip is only in light demand. Buying at 50c; selling at 55@56c.

The Directors of the German National Bank of this city, for the ensuing year, were elected yesterday. Their names will be found in an other column. An election of Directors for the First National Bank was also held yesterday. A majority of the old gentlemen elected, were members of the old Board.

Our last weekly review closed on a quiet market, with additions to-day. On Wednesday the Liverpool market declined ½d on all grades, and our brokers were unable to realize. Middlings declined here to 16c. On Thursday there was a further decline here of ½c—Middlings closing at 15½@16c, while the Eastern markets were dull throughout. A change came on Friday, and prices ran up to Monday in Liverpool market had advanced ⅛@¼d on Uplands in New York Uplands closed at 16c, and this market was active at 14@15c. On Monday the Liverpool market was active and Uplands advanced ⅛d. On this day, at noon, Brokers advanced their figures, and that market closed with Uplands at 15c, while the was reading published here for bright styles of Middling. There were no dispatches received yesterday until the close of business, but the inquiry was active during the day for fine cottons, which are very scarce. The major part of the stock on hand is made up of low grade, among which stained cottons are the most abundant. The bad weather of the past few days has put a stop to shipments, but notwithstanding, agents are numerous as dealers, as a general thing are asking from ½ to ½ over our quotations, but sales for the day were effected as follows:

Stained	12½@13½
Ordinary	13 @ —
Good Ordinary	13½@14
Low Middling	14 @14½
Middling	15½@15⅞
Strict Middling	15¾@16
Good Middling	16 @16¼

Wholesale Market.

There has not been much activity in the general market during the commercial week just closed. The severe weather for the last few days has been somewhat of a drawback, as freights could not be handled without damage. The close of navigation to St. Louis has also had a depressing effect. The Dry Goods trade for the week has been light. Prices are about the same as formerly and could not well be lower as none of our merchants are getting first cost for goods nor can stocks be replaced at present figures ruling here. Staple articles alone are called for and they are only taken in very small quantities. The Leather and Boot trade has not improved in volume. Stocks are low, especially in white wax, for which alone is there any demand. Dealers are anxious to close out and as the holder cannot close to cash buyers in this as well as all other kinds of merchandise. The Live Stock market is a been more active, owing to the cold weather, and light receipts of dressed meats for some days back. Choice Cattle are in good demand and supply light, as are Hogs. Provision market has been quiet and stock of Bulk Meats enlarging daily. Prices have been steady during the week and are about the same as in St. Louis or Cincinnati. Recent flatboat arrivals have added extensively to the stock of provisions as well as produce. Potatoes are plentiful and prices weak, except for choice Pink Eyes, which are in good demand for seed. Onions in light supply and firm. Oats are also in demand and firm. Feed is dull. Meal is very dull with only a light local trade doing.
